

Our last newsletter began the year with a great deal of positive news from the Stillwater Group - new product innovations from A Plus Joinery and BSi accreditation for A Plus Aluminium. As we progress through 2009 we are delighted to bring you yet more good news regarding our products and service, plus another great offer to help you get more from us whenever you order.

However busy we are, we also like to think that we are both always available if you need us, so please don't hesitate to pick up the phone or send us an email if there is anything we can personally help you with. In the meantime - thank you for your continued business and support.

Agent Provocateur - a seriously good looking project

And finally - keeping in touch ...

We want to ensure you know all about what we do here at Stillwater which is why we will continue to compile these newsletters every few months. To help ensure you know what products and services we offer, we've brought out a brand new company brochure which highlights all of our product ranges and service - just give us a call to get the whole picture.

Agent Provocateur's unique styling has been reflected in the transformation of a 1960s building in London with all of the fenestration fabricated by A Plus Aluminium.

The four-storey building was completely stripped back to its steel frame before new windows and spandrel panels were installed. The high levels of natural light in the building were maintained by the use of slim aluminium window frames in a striking black, RAL9006, featuring a Georgian bar detail to replicate the original steel frames.

The project had a 22-week build schedule which called for precise and detailed programming of the external works in a busy London location where access was limited.

The dramatic new elevations are both highly functional, in allowing the maximum amount of light to flood the building, and reflective of the style of the buildings occupants.
